Part 4

Listen to the following paragraph and answer the questions.

Question 7-8

In the Japanese town of Otsuchi, a white telephone booth sits in a garden. Known as the Phone of the Wind, the phone booth helps people deal with grief. Itaru Sasaki is a 72-year-old garden designer. In 2010, Sasaki installed the phone in his garden as a way to speak to his cousin, who passed away from cancer. Although the phone was disconnected, Sasaki felt it allowed him to connect with his dead relative. In 2011, a tsunami hit northeastern Japan. The disaster killed 10 percent of Otsuchi's population. To help people overcome the loss of family and friends, Sasaki opened his telephone booth to the public. The phone gave people a chance to say things they never got a chance to say to their loved ones.

7. What is true about the white telephone booth?

- (A) It put a ban on making calls for free.
- (B) It is not connected to any outside lines.
- (C) It was built right after the 2011 tsunami.
- (D) It is considered an awful eyesore in Otsuchi.

8. What did Sasaki do after the tsunami?

- (A) He tore down the phone booth in his garden.
- (B) He installed more phone booths around Japan.
- (C) He called people who had lost their loved ones.
- (D) He agreed that strangers could use his telephone booth.

Question 9-10

The 2019-2020 wildfires in Australia were notably the most destructive. The fires started in September 2019, and the situation significantly worsened in November 2019. In mid-January 2020, some heavy rains brought relief to certain areas affected by the fires, providing a brief break for firefighters. However, it was not sufficient to fully extinguish the fires. The crisis escalated again in early February in 2020, driven by hotter temperatures, drought, and high winds. By mid-February, an exceptionally heavy rainstorm allowed firefighters to contain all the fires in New South Wales, though fires continued to burn in Victoria. Fortunately, on March 4, 2020, all the fires were either extinguished or contained, marking the end of a nine-month-long battle.

9. What helped control all the fires in New South Wales?

- (A) Irrigation systems.
- (B) An extreme downpour.
- (C) A new hydrant for firefighting.
- (D) Relief supplies from other countries.

10. How long did it take to either extinguish or contain the Australia wildfires?

- (A) One month.
- (B) Six months.
- (C) Nine months.
- (D) One year.
