(C)

Halal food is a type of food that is considered proper for Muslims to eat according to Islamic law. The word "halal" means "permissible" in Arabic. Halal rules guide not only what kinds of food can be eaten but also how animals are raised, treated, and slaughtered. For example, meat must come from healthy animals that are slaughtered in a specific way, and the name of God must be mentioned during the process. Certain foods, like pork and alcohol, are strictly forbidden. Halal principles extend beyond ingredients to include cleanliness, hygiene, and the ethical treatment of animals. Today, halal food is widely available around the world, from restaurants to packaged products, and it is enjoyed by both Muslims and non-Muslims who value its careful preparation and quality standards.

7. What does the word "halal" mean in Arabic?

8. Which of the following topics is NOT mentioned in the passage as being guided by Halal rules?

9. According to the passage, why do the non-Muslims enjoy halal food?
