Passage 1 (Read questions 7 and 8 before listening to Passage 1)

Hello, class. Last week we talked about the backfire effect. Today we're going to explore a similar effect, called confirmation bias. This occurs when we pick out things that match our beliefs and ignore the rest. We do this because we like feeling right about how we see the world. We often look for news that supports our views, whether it's true or not. It's natural to want our world to make sense, but this bias can stop us from seeing the whole truth. Consider a scientist who only sees results that match their idea. It's like that for us, too. If we only notice what we agree with, such as choosing news that matches our politics, we miss out on the full story. (May Unit 2)

D 7. Why do people experience confirmation bias?

- (A) They want to learn new, conflicting ideas.
- (B) They want to find out all types of news.
- (C) They are afraid they would be easily influenced.
- (D) They prefer information that fits their beliefs.

A 8. What problem does confirmation bias cause?

- (A) It prevents us from seeing all sides of a situation.
- (B) It reduces the opportunity to join a political group.
- (C) It stops us from discussing ideas with people.
- (D) It prevents us from forgetting important things.

Passage 2 (Read questions 9 and 10 before listening to Passage 2)

Hello, I'm Larry from AMC Online Storage Auctions. I'm here to explain how online storage auctions work. Like traditional auctions, online auctions must follow state laws about selling items from unpaid storage units. The process starts by setting up an online account at the website. Then, you'll take several photos of the unit from different angles, and upload these photos for the auction. On auction day, everything happens online, which means no crowded parking lots or weather problems. The winning bidder then pays at your store. We suggest giving them 72 hours to clear the unit. This method attracts more bidders, increasing the chances of earning more from each auction. Why not try online auctions and see how easy and effective they are? (May Unit 11)

B 9. What do we know about online storage auctions?

- (A) Bidders must visit the storage unit in person.
- (B) State laws still apply to online storage auctions.
- (C) The winning bidder has to upload some photos of the unit.
- (D) Weather conditions might influence how online storage auctions work.

D 10. How much time does the speaker suggest giving the winning bidder to clear the unit?

- (A) One hour.
- (B) One month.
- (C) Two weeks.
- (D) Three days.
