Quotations 佳句抄錄:

- You don't love someone because they're perfect. You love them in spite of the fact that they're not.
- When you care more if someone else lives than you do about your self.. is that what love's like?

Notes 筆記欄

Anna was asked to be the donor of whatever Kate needs. Until the age of 13, Anna was asked to donate one of her kidney. She filed a law suit for her rights of her own body, and she win the suit. In the end, it is revealed that Kate asked Anna to sue, because she didn't want Anna's kidney. She wanted to die.

However, as the lawyer drives Anna home. their car was hit by a truck. Anna was hit on the head and went brain dead.

In the end, Kate recieved Anna's kidney. She stayed in remmison for another 6 years, and became a danced teacher.

Yes. It's one of the most heart-touching stories I've seen.

3. (If the book is fiction) Who was your favorite character? Why?

(If the book is non-fiction) What new information did you learn?

Kate (Anna's sister). She accept her illness and the fact she's dying. She didn't want Anna's kidney even it might save her life.

4. If you could change anything about the book, what would you change? Why?

I like the movie version's ending better. Kate died as Anna lives on. And the whole family are brought together again in

5. What connection from this book can you make to your personal life? Why did you choose it? Kate's sake.

Not really. But it makes me think a lot about my own family.

My Discovery 心得: (80~100 words)

This is one of my favorite novels of all time. I almost cried when I first see the ending.

Anna & Kate really cares about each other. For Kate to ask Anna to file the suit, it means giving up the last treatment she could get. She doesn't want Anna to suffer anymore.

But it wasn't easy for Anna too. While filing the suit, she go along Kate's will, which means to let her die without Anna's kidney. Imagine how hard it is to watch the person you love the most dying.

If I were Anna or Kate, will I make the same decision?

I honestly hope I will.
